

A Success Story...

Cornhusker Place

Sheila, a 55 year old grandmother, was chronically addicted to inhalants and alcohol. For four years, Sheila had been using alcohol as her way of coping with stress about her daughter's brain aneurism and son's military deployment, but, she wanted to stop. Whenever Sheila attempted to stop drinking, her heart would race and she would begin to have tremors. Sheila came to Cornhusker Place's Medical Detoxification Unit and continued with ongoing Outpatient Treatment. Sheila emphasizes that Cornhusker Place saved her life by providing her medical safety as she took the first step to sobriety. She now is able to help her daughter, son, and grandchildren.
