

Dear Colleagues,

Exciting news! Yesterday Governor Pillen announced Lee Will is taking over as the next Director of Administrative Services. The Governor has made an excellent choice to run our agency. I’ve known Lee for the duration of my tenure in State government and can think of no leader better positioned to take our team forward. Having served on Governor Pillen’s staff as State Budget Director, Lee understands State government, and is a subject matter expert on government efficiency. He’s also well positioned to influence and partner with our sister agencies. As a bonus, Lee is already familiar with our work from having served in an interim capacity in 2022. I spoke with Lee this morning, and I know he is excited about this opportunity and looking forward to getting to know all of you.

Now the sad part. Today marks my last day as Director of Administrative Services. Serving the people of Nebraska alongside all of you has been the honor of my career. I truly believe that this team is the most engaged, altruistic, and high performing organization in all of State government. What’s more, you are all really fun to work with! I’m so proud of all that we accomplished together. I wish you all every success, and hope you will stay in touch and not hesitate to let me know if I can ever be of service to you. A few ways to stay in touch with me:

Email: jacksonjasonl@gmail.com

LinkedIn: <https://www.linkedin.com/in/jasonjacksonne/>

Fair winds and following seas!

Jason Jackson

Director, Nebraska Department of Administrative Services